

INDIA PRESENTS TWO REMARKABLE CASES OF WEIRD REINCARNATION

One Blue-Eyed Three-Year-Old Boy Claims He Was the Late Maj. Walsh, Who Was Drowned—Another Child is Murdered Man

RANGOON, India, October 19.—Reincarnation, which is a fundamental doctrine of Buddhism, has recently presented two cases which are so extraordinary as to invite the interest of all foreigners. A reincarnation of human identity in human form, although changed in outward appearance, is called a "minza," and is usually a very ordinary looking child. The "minzas" in the present cases are the children of very humble Burmese parents, and the souls they are said to possess are those of two British officers who died at the time the "minzas" were born. The story of one "minza" is related in the Rangoon Times, and, without comment, at least furnishes a curious and interesting glimpse of a phase of Burmese belief. It runs as follows:

"There is a little blue-eyed, light-haired boy here, between three and four years old, the son of hard-working and matter-of-fact Burmese parents belonging to the laboring classes, who, until quite recently, prattled like any other child of that age. The other day, however, he astonished his mother by gravely claiming that he was the late Major J. J. Welsh, Border regiment, come to life again, and went on to describe the house in which he had previously lived, the number of ponies he had and other personal matters.

Mother Was Frightened
"His mother was frightened, and she called in the neighbors, to whom the queer albino repeated his story, describing how he and two others—a lady and a gentleman—were drowned in the Meiktila lake in a boating accident during a storm at night in March, 1904, when the three and only occupants of the boat perished. That is the year in which Mrs. Reade, Lieutenant A. W. Quinan and Major Welsh, the two latter of the Border regiment, died. The child, in this manner, as a consequence of omitting to put down the centerboard of their sailing boat.

"Large crowds assembled daily to hear the little child-man speak. Of course, skeptics will say that it is a 'put-up job.' The answer to this is that Burmese coolies are not given to romancing to such an extent. Several methods have been applied to test the genuineness of the child's utterances, and people are satisfied that he has not been tutored. The parents, indeed, would have to be wide-awake shoppers to succeed in foisting such a story upon the public through the instrumentality of a mere infant, and there is no suggestion that they are not what they appear to be—simple-minded folk."

Told Story of the Murder
A few years back A. W. Tucker, district superintendent of police in Pegu, was killed by a gang of Ducoits, whom he had rashly attacked at close quarters after discharging his revolver and without waiting to reload it. His call to the orderly to fetch ammunition gave the clue to the Ducoits, and they killed him. Just about the time this tragedy was being enacted in one part of the district, an humble Burmese woman gave birth to a boy, who, in time, before the days of his babyhood were well over, claimed to be no less a personage than the murdered police officer. So circumstantial were his accounts of the encounter with the Ducoits as to appear the narrative of an eye-witness, and when questioned on various other points in connection with the life of the deceased officer, he is asserted to have answered with such exactitude that the Burmese people who flocked to hear him discourse were convinced of the truth of his assertions. Peculiarities of action and speech were faithfully reproduced and, generally, quite a sensation was created.

WHY THEY WED GENTILES

Explanation of Frequent Marriages of Jewesses Outside Their Faith

LONDON, October 19.—A writer in the Jewish World, who signs herself "A Jewess Girl," is of the opinion that blame for much of the marrying that goes on between Jewish girls and men of other faiths, and against which the chief rabbi recently inveighed, is to be laid at the door of the Jewish young man.

It is alleged by the "Jewish Girl" that the average middle-class Jewish youth is outrageously spoiled by his family, and therefore sets an excessively high value upon himself, which does not conduce to the establishment of friendly relations between himself and girls of his own class. Moreover, it is said, the Jewish young men are not content to start their married lives in simple fashion, and therefore usually require to marry where money is—if not actually for money.

REAL GHOSTS THAT WALK IN THE DAYLIGHT

A Pretty White Rabbit With Soft Coat and Pink Eyes Dispenses Terror in Neighborhood of a Graveyard—The Little Green Woman

There is a little village in Cornwall, near to the spot where the infamous Tregagle once worked his wicked will, which has a ghost only seen in summer time. This takes the form of a white rabbit, a pretty creature with soft coat and pink eyes, which gambols in the long, sweet grass outside the churchyard wall. Many have seen it as they pass, but none of the villagers ever stop to watch it, for it has a strange and unattractive habit of following the passerby.

Once, on a brilliant moonlit August night, a postman found the rabbit at his heels. He walked faster and faster, but still the rabbit followed.

At last, in blind fright, he turned and struck at the creature with all his might with his heavy walking-stick. He felt the stick strike the little creature, but instead of harming it the cudgel was splintered, while the rabbit leaped on as if nothing had happened.

There is another story connected with this rabbit. One evening a stranger to the village passed and saw the rabbit and thought nothing of it until the villagers at the inn told him of its curious attributes. He jeered and vowed that if anyone would lend him a gun he would go and shoot it. Some told him he was foolish, others said he would not dare, but one gave him a gun.

He loaded it and walked whistling away, through the white moonlight. A long time passed, he did not return, the men grew anxious and went to look for him. Beside the churchyard wall they found him dead. One barrel of the gun was discharged. Next evening the rabbit was there, as usual, gambolling on the long grass.

A little further north, on the high tops of Dartmoor, live the pixies, fairy-like elves who show themselves principally upon summer evenings. A farmer who had been cutting turf on the moor not far from Mary Tavy was coming home about 9 o'clock on a July evening when suddenly, in a "clitter" of dark boulders, he saw a couple of some of the tiny forms apparently dancing and playing together.

The man badly frightened, he was so startled that he approached softly. But before he got very near one must have seen him. There were little sharp cries and suddenly he was enveloped in a mist so thick that he could see nothing more and was forced to stumble back toward his path, blindly barking his shins upon the rocks. After a little the fog cleared, but all signs of the pixies were gone.

Scotland's moors and deer forests are full of the romance of fairies, witches and other supernatural beings, and these by no means confine their activities to winter-time or to night. The fairies, in fact, keep strictly at home during winter, and only show themselves above ground on warm summer nights.

There was an old lady living near Calet who averred that she had more than once seen "the little green woman." This personage is apparently half-fairy, half-human, for she has a curious habit of milking the wild red hinds.

Then, there is another ghost who haunts a boulder in the River Tilt. A genuine ghost this, for it takes the form of a Highland chieftain of old times and may be seen in the gloaming of a summer evening sitting there gloomy and motionless on the rock in the middle of the stream. The rock is only uncovered when the water is low, and the story goes that the chieftain himself used to hold his court there, and whenever he did so used to hang at least one of those brought before him.

In Crete and other islands of the Eastern Mediterranean the peasants are not half so much afraid of venturing abroad at midnight as they are of being alone in the woods at midday. The hot, still, scented moon is the hour of danger, for then the dryads are at liberty to leave their home in the hearts of ancient trees, and all believe that the human who sets eyes upon one of these beautiful woodland divinities must surely go mad.

Further east, again, Arabia and Ceylon have their daylight ghosts. In the peninsula of Sinal strange sounds are heard among the mountains when the sun is at its highest and hottest.
